WHY TRAIN PERSONNEL AS COMPANY & SHIP SECURITY OFFICERS?

In response to the growing threat of global terrorism, new measures relating to the security of ships and port facilities has been adopted by the IMO. A new chapter has been added to SOLAS and there is a new code called the "International Ship and Port Facility Security (ISPS) Code". Part A of the code will be mandatory, Part B provides guidance for the Code. However, some Flag States may require mandatory compliance to both Part A & B of the Code. The deadline for compliance with the requirements of the ISPS Code is 1st July 2004.

Sections 11 & 12 of Part A of the ISPS Code require that shipping companies designate company security officer(s) and a ship security officer on each ship, with various duties and responsibilities related to maritime security. Section 13 of the ISPS Code in both Part A & Part B lays out the requirements of training, drills & exercises for them. It is clearly stated that the Company Security Officer (CSO) and the Ship Security Officer (SSO) should have appropriate knowledge through training in the security topics defined therein.

With so many shipping companies requiring to train their shore staff and seagoing officers as CSO / SSO in a short time frame, it is essential that your Company provides the required training as soon as possible. This will assist you to achieve a quick and smooth implementation through the efforts of these trained personnel.
